PowerMand™, MacDonald-Miller sign distribution agreement

Portland, Oregon (August 26, 2008) — A new distribution agreement between PowerMand™, Inc., and MacDonald-Miller Facility Solutions, Inc. provides a vehicle for delivering cost-effective energy management to small commercial sites throughout the Pacific Northwest.

The agreement authorizes Seattle-based MacDonald-Miller to supply PowerMand's innovative DreamWatts™ Small Site Energy Management system to MacDonald Miller's facility management clients in Oregon and Washington.

“We're pleased to be teaming with MacDonald-Miller in the distribution of DreamWatts,” says Dan Russell, PowerMand's founder and CEO. “This agreement is a significant step toward reducing energy usage and costs by allowing businesses to directly monitor and manage energy consumption in their facilities.”

Designed for spaces measuring less than 10,000 square feet, DreamWatts is a user-friendly, web-based technology that automatically controls and optimizes energy usage for maximum efficiency without sacrificing comfort. The system monitors heating and cooling through the use of a simple-to-install intelligent gateway, which communicates wirelessly with thermostats, load control modules and other energy management devices.

MacDonald-Miller will focus on introducing DreamWatts to customers in small office buildings and strip malls as well as the banking, retail and restaurant industries.

“Concerns about the economy and the environment are on everyone's minds,” says Perry England, MacDonald-Miller's vice president of building performance. “With DreamWatts, our light commercial customers have a cost-effective building automation solution that will save them money and reduce their environmental impact. We're excited to have the opportunity to offer this solution as part of our overall services.”

PowerMand was founded in Portland, Oregon in 2006 in response to increasing demand for cost-effective energy management for small commercial sites and residences. DreamWatts is the company's premier product.

MacDonald-Miller Facility Solutions is a premier provider of what are considered to be the right solutions for building environmental systems through innovative design, expert installation, and high-performance services. Established in 1965, the company has helped change the local landscape with thousands of highly successful projects.
